Headline:

Showery in the north and east overnight, some heavy downpours.

This Evening and Tonight:

It will become mostly dry in the west but showers are likely in the north and east with some heavy and perhaps thundery overnight. Turning misty with hill and coastal fog and low cloud forming in light winds.

Friday:

Much of the mist and low cloud will clear, although persisting around some coasts. Bright spells developing with scattered heavy and perhaps thundery showers. Warm and humid with light winds.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:

Rain in the north and northwest on Saturday, brightest across the southeast. Mainly dry and bright on Sunday and Monday. Cooler and fresher than of late.
